(b) CHEMISTRY going to the positive electrode in electrolysis; having a tendency to attract electrons: E19. electro negatively adverb (CHEMISTRY) as an electronegative substance E20. electronega tivity noun (CHEMISTRY) the degree to which an atom etc. attracts electrons; the state of being electronegative: E20. electro neutral adjective (CHEMISTRY) electrically neutral M20. electroneu trality noun (CHEMISTRY) the state of being electrically neutral M20. electrony stagmogram noun (MEDICINE) a chart or record that is produced by an electronystagmograph L20. electrony stagmograph noun (MEDICINE) an electro-oculograph that is used in electronystagmography M20. electronystagmo graphic adjective (MEDICINE) of or pertaining to electronystagmography M20. electronystagmo graphically adverb (MEDICINE) by means of electronystagmography L20. electronystag mography noun the investigation of nystagmus by electro-oculographic means E20. electro- oculogram noun (MEDICINE) (a) a chart or record produced by an electro-oculograph; (b) = ELECTRO-OCULOGRAPH: M20. electro- oculograph noun (MEDICINE) an instrument that records the varying electric potentials of points near the eye as a guide to eye movement M20. electro-oculo graphic adjective (MEDICINE) of or pertaining to electro-oculography M20. electro-oculo graphically adverb (MEDICINE) by means of electro-oculography M20. electro-ocu lography noun (MEDICINE) the use of an electro-oculograph or electro-oculograms M20. electro-' optic adjective pertaining to or involving the effect of an electric field on light; of or pertaining to electro-optics: L19. electro-' optical adjective = ELECTRO-OPTIC E20. electro-' optically adverb by means of an electro-optic device or effect E20. electro-' optics noun the branch of science that deals with the effect of electric fields on light and the optical properties of substances L19. electro- osmosis noun osmosis under the influence of an electric field E20. electro-os motic adjective of, pertaining to, or involving electro-osmosis E20. electro-os motically adverb by means of or as regards electro-osmosis E20. electropaint, electropainting nouns the application of paint by electrocoating M20. electrophile noun (CHEMISTRY) an electrophilic substance or molecule E20. electro philic adjective (CHEMISTRY) having or involving an affinity for electrons M20. electrophoto graphic adjective of, pertaining to, or produced by electrophotography M20. electropho tography noun any of various techniques in which fixed images are obtained by means of electricity; esp. one that makes use of the photoconductive properties of certain materials, as in xerography: L19. electrophysio logical adjective of or pertaining to electrophysiology or its subject matter M20. electrophysio logically adverb by means of or as regards electrophysiology M20. electrophysi ologist noun an expert in or student of electrophysiology L19. electrophysi ology noun the branch of physiology that deals with the electrical phenomena associated with nervous and other bodily activity; the electrical phenomena of a bodily process or organ: M19. electroplaque noun (ZOOLOGY) a flattened electrocyte L20. electroplax noun (ZOOLOGY) = ELECTROPLAQUE E20. electroplexy noun [APO)PLEXY] electroconvulsive therapy M20. electropneu matic adjective involving both electric and pneumatic power or operation L19. electro polish verb trans. polish (metal) by electrolysis M20. electro positive adjective †(a) electrically positive; (b) CHEMISTRY going to the negative electrode in electrolysis; having valence electrons that are readily removed: E19. electro positively adverb (CHEMISTRY) as an electropositive substance E20. electroposi tivity noun the degree to which an atom etc. tends to form a positive ion; the state of being electropositive: M20. electrore ception noun (ZOOLOGY) the detection of electric fields or currents by an animal L20. e lectrore ceptor noun (ZOOLOGY) a sensory receptor that responds to an electric field or current M20. electrore duction noun chemical reduction by electrolytic means E20. electro retinogram noun (MEDICINE) a chart or record of the electrical activity of the retina M20. electro retinograph noun (MEDICINE) an instrument that records or displays the electrical activity of the retina L20. electroretino graphic adjective (MEDICINE) involving or pertaining to electroretinography M20. electroreti nography noun (MEDICINE) the practice or technique of using electroretinograms M20. electroscope noun an electrostatic instrument for detecting the presence and sign of electric charge, used also to ascertain the degree of ionization of the air E19. electro scopic adjective of, pertaining to, or involving an electroscope M19. electroshock noun (MEDICINE) an electric shock; the therapeutic use of electric shocks: M19. electro-' silver noun articles electroplated with silver L19. electro-slag adjective designating a process for welding or refining metal in which an electric current is passed into the metal through a layer of slag lying on top of it M20. electro striction noun the elastic deformation of a dielectric in an electric field when independent of the reversal of the field and proportional to the square of the field strength E20. electro strictive adjective of, pertaining to, or employing electrostriction M20. electro surgery noun surgery using (esp. high-frequency) electricity L19. electro surgical adjective by means of or using electrosurgery E20. electro synthesis noun chemical synthesis effected by electricity L19. electro technical adjective of or pertaining to electrotechnics L19. electrotech nician noun an expert in or student of electrotechnics E20. electro technics noun electrical technology, electrical engineering L19. electrothera peutic, electrothera peutical adjectives of or pertaining to electrotherapy E20. electrothera peutics noun = ELECTROTHERAPY M19. electro- therapy noun medical treatment by means of electricity, as in diathermy and electroconvulsive therapy L19. electro therapist noun a person who employs electrotherapy E20. electro thermal, electro thermic adjectives using or involving the conversion of electricity into heat L19. electro tin verb trans. coat with tin electrolytically L19. electro valence, electro valency nouns (CHEMISTRY) valency, or a bond, in which oppositely charged ions are bound together by the electrostatic attraction between them E20. electro valent adjective (CHEMISTRY) of, pertaining to, or designating (an) electrovalency E20. electrovi scosity noun the property of being electroviscous; the component of the viscosity of a substance that is due to the electroviscous effect: M20. electro viscous adjective having a viscosity that depends on any electric field that is present; of or pertaining to electroviscosity: M20. electro weak adjective (PHYSICS) pertaining to or designating the weak and electromagnetic interactions regarded as different low-energy manifestations of a single interaction L20.

electrocute /ɪˈlɛktrəkjuːt/ verb trans. L19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- after execute.]
1 Put to death by a strong electric current as a means of capital punishment. L19.
2 Cause death of by electric shock. E20.
■ electro cution noun execution by electricity; death caused by electricity: L19.

electrode /ɪˈlɛktrəʊd/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRIC + Greek hodos way, after anode, cathode.]
A conductor by which electricity enters or leaves an object, substance, or region.
A. CLARE Two electrodes . . are applied to the anterior temporal areas of the scalp.
■ electrodeless adjective L19.

electrodynamic /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)dʌɪˈnamɪk/ adjective. E19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + DYNAMIC.]
Of or pertaining to the interactions of electric currents with magnetic fields or with other electric currents; (of a device) employing the effects of such an interaction.
■ electrodynamical adjective = ELECTRODYNAMIC E20. electrodynamics noun the branch of physics that deals with electrodynamic phenomena E19.

electrogenic /ɪˌlɛktrəˈ(ʊ)ˈdʒɛnɪk/ adjective. L19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + -GENIC.]
That produces electricity; spec. (PHYSIOLOGY) tending to produce a change in electric potential. electrogenic pump: that transfers ions through a cell membrane and alters the potential across the membrane.
■ e lectroge nicity noun M20.

electrolier /ɪˌlɛktrəˈliə/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- after chandelier.]
A chandelier in which the lights are electric.

electrolyse /ɪˈlɛktrəlʌɪz/ verb trans. Also -lyze. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTROLYSIS after analyse.]
Subject to electrolysis; pass an electric current through (a liquid) so as to cause decomposition.
■ electroly sation noun the process of electrolysing M19. electrolyser noun L20.

electrolysis /ɪˌlɛkˈtrɒlɪsɪs, ˌɛlɛkˈtrɒlɪsɪs/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + -LYSIS.]
1 Chemical decomposition produced by the passage of an electric current through a liquid; the process of passing a current through a liquid to produce a chemical reaction at the electrodes. M19.
2 MEDICINE. The destruction of tumours and calculi by passing an electric current through them. Now rare. M19.
3 The removal of body hair by passing an electric current through the root. E20.

electrolyte /ɪˈlɛktrəlʌɪt/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + Greek lutos released, from luein to release.]
A liquid which contains ions and can be decomposed by electrolysis; spec. one used as battery fluid. Also, a substance which gives rise to ions when dissolved, usu. in water, or fused; the ionized or ionizable constituents of a living cell, blood, or other tissue.

electrolytic /ɪˌlɛktrəˈlɪtɪk/ adjective & noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTROLYTE + -IC.]
▸ A adjective. Of, pertaining to, or produced by electrolysis; employing or involving electrolysis. M19.
▸ B noun. Copper that has been refined by electrolysis. E20.
■ electrolytical adjective = ELECTROLYTIC adjective M19. electrolytically adverb by means of electrolysis; as regards electrolysis: L19.

electrolyze verb see ELECTROLYSE.

electromagnet /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)ˈmagnɪt/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + MAGNET.]
A piece of soft iron surrounded by a coil of wire so that it can be made temporarily magnetic by passing an electric current through the wire.

electromagnetic /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)magˈnɛtɪk/ adjective. E19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + MAGNETIC.]
Of or pertaining to the interrelation of electric currents or fields and magnetic fields; having both electric and magnetic aspects or properties.
electromagnetic radiation: consisting of electromagnetic waves (e.g. light, radio waves, X-rays). electromagnetic spectrum the range of wavelengths or frequencies over which electromagnetic radiation extends. electromagnetic units a largely disused system of electrical units based on the force between two magnetic poles, assuming the permeability of the vacuum to be 1. electromagnetic wave a wave consisting of a travelling periodic fluctuation in both an electric and a magnetic field, these fields being at right angles to each other and to the direction of propagation of the wave.
■ electromagnetically adverb by means of electromagnetism L19. e lectro magnetism noun electromagnetic phenomena and properties; the branch of physics that deals with these: E19.

electromeric /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)ˈmɛrɪk/ adjective. E20.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- after ISOMERIC.]
CHEMISTRY. Of, pertaining to, or designating a postulated displacement of electrons in a molecule during a reaction.

electromotive /ɪˌlɛktrəˈməʊtɪv/ adjective. E19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + MOTIVE adjective.]
Pertaining to the flow of an electric current. Chiefly in electromotive force below.
electromotive force a force or difference in potential that tends to give rise to an electric current; abbreviation emf, EMF.

electromotor /ɪˈlɛktrə(ʊ)məʊtə/ noun. E19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + MOTOR noun.]
Orig., a metal serving as an element of a voltaic cell. Now, an electric motor.

electron /ɪˈlɛktrɒn/ noun[1]. M19.
[ORIGIN Greek ēlektron.]
= ELECTRUM 1.

electron /ɪˈlɛktrɒn/ noun[2]. L19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRIC + -ON.]
A stable subatomic particle which has a constant charge of negative electricity, is a constituent of all atoms, and is the primary carrier of electric current in solids. Cf. LEPTON noun[2].
Auger electron: see AUGER noun[2] 2. planetary electron: see PLANETARY adjective. positive electron = POSITRON.
– COMB.: electron diffraction the diffraction of a beam of electrons by atoms and molecules (used to investigate crystal structure); electron gun a device in which electrons from a heated cathode are emitted as a narrow beam, e.g. in a cathode-ray tube; electron lens a device for focusing a beam of electrons by means of a magnetic or electric field; electron micrograph a magnified image obtained with an electron microscope; electron microscope: using a beam of electrons focused by electron lenses in order to achieve much greater magnification and resolution than is possible with light; electron multiplier a device for amplifying a current of electrons by utilizing secondary emission of electrons at a succession of anodes; electron optics the branch of physics that deals with the behaviour of electrons and electron beams in magnetic and electric fields; electron pair (a) CHEMISTRY two electrons of opposite spin occupying the same orbital in an atom or molecule; (b) PHYSICS an electron and a positron produced together by a high-energy reaction; electron shell: see SHELL noun 23; electron spin resonance resonance in which the transition involved is that of electrons between states of different spin (used to investigate molecular structure etc.); electron tube an evacuated or gas-filled tube in which a current of electrons flows from one electrode to another; electronvolt a unit of energy equal to that gained or lost by an electron moving through a potential difference of 1 volt, equal to 1.602×10^{-19} joule (symbol eV).

electronic /ɪlɛkˈtrɒnɪk, ɛl-/ adjective. E20.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRON noun[2] + -IC.]
1 Of or pertaining to the electron or electrons. E20.

C. P. SNOW The electronic structure of the specific atoms.
P. W. ATKINS Electronic transitions, when electrons are shifted from one region of an atom or molecule to another.

2 Designating a device that operates according to the principles or methods of electronics, such as a transistor microchip, or electron tube; operating by means of or employing such devices; (of a musical instrument) generating sound by such devices rather than by mechanical vibration; (of music) using sounds generated or modified electronically and usu. recorded on tape. E20.

Times The largest dollar order for electronic equipment . . yet received in this country.

3 Of or pertaining to electronics; (of a person) expert in electronics. M20.

M. MCLUHAN The new electronic and organic age. Physics Bulletin The central part to be played by the electronics industry, and the electronic technician in particular.

4 Using the electronic transmission or storage of information, as by television or computer. L20.

Daily Telegraph Evangelists who have made the Electronic Church of the airwaves a power in the . . life of the United States. British Medical Journal The launch of an electronic journal, Clinical Notes On-line.

– SPECIAL COLLOCATIONS: electronic flash a very brief but bright flash of light obtained by discharging a capacitor through a gas-discharge tube; a flashgun that produces such a flash. electronic mail the sending of non-spoken information between individuals over a telecommunication network to a location where it is stored for subsequent retrieval, usu. in a computer; information sent in this way. electronic publishing the issuing of texts as electronic files rather than on paper. electronic tag: see TAG noun[1] 10g. electronic tagging: see TAGGING noun 1(a). electronic typewriter: in which solid-state circuitry is used to provide facilities such as the storage of typed characters.
■ electronically adverb by electronic means; as regards an electron or electrons: E20.

electronica /ɪlɛkˈtrɒnɪkə/ noun. L20.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRONIC + -A[3].]
1 Electronic music, spec. a type deriving from techno and rave music and having an ambient or cerebral quality. L20.
2 Electronic devices or technology considered collectively. L20.

electronics /ɪlɛkˈtrɒnɪks, ɛl-/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN formed as ELECTRONIC + -ICS.]
The branch of physics and technology that deals with the behaviour and flow of electrons, esp. in devices and circuits in which the flow is controlled and utilized.

electronographic /ɪˌlɛktrɒnəˈgrafɪk/ adjective. M20.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRON noun[2] + -O- + -GRAPHIC.]
1 Employing or designating a printing process in which ink is transferred without pressure by utilizing electrostatic attraction. M20.
2 Pertaining to or designating an image tube in which photoelectrons are accelerated and focused on a sensitive emulsion to form an image. M20.
■ electronograph noun an image obtained by electronography L20. electronography noun (the use of) electronographic techniques M20.

electrophone /ɪˈlɛktrəfəʊn/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + -PHONE.]
1 hist. An instrument which produced sounds in response to an electric current, e.g. from an induction coil or telephone. M19.
2 Any musical instrument in which the sound is electronically generated or amplified. M20.

electrophonic /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)ˈfɒnɪk/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTROPHONE + -IC.]
1 Of, pertaining to, or designating an electrophone; (of music) electronic. M19.
2 Of, pertaining to, or designating a sensation of sound produced by the passage of an alternating current or electromagnetic waves through a person. M20.

electrophoresis /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)fəˈrɪːsɪs/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + Greek phorēsis being carried.]
1 The migration of molecules or colloidal particles through a liquid or gel under the influence of an applied electric field; a technique employing this to separate, identify, or measure the components of protein mixtures etc. E20.
2 MEDICINE. = CATAPHORESIS 1. L20.
■ electrophorese /-ˈrɪːz/ verb trans. subject to electrophoresis L20. electrophoretic adjective E20. electrophoretically adverb M20.

electrophorus /ɪlɛkˈtrɒf(ə)rəs, ɛl-/ noun. Also anglicized as electrophore /ɪˈlɛktrəfɔː/. L18.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO-: see -PHORE.]
A simple device for building up a static charge, consisting of a dielectric disc that is given a negative charge by friction, and a metal plate that is placed on the disc and then earthed, so that it acquires a positive charge when it is removed.

electroplate /ɪˈlɛktrə(ʊ)pleɪt, ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)ˈpleɪt/ verb & noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + PLATE verb, noun.]
▸ A verb trans. Give (a metal article) a coating of silver, chromium, or other metal by use as the cathode, with the coating metal as the anode, in an electrolytic bath. M19.
▸ B noun. 1 Electroplated articles. M19.
2 BIOLOGY. = ELECTROPLAQUE. M20.
■ electroplater noun M19.

electroporation /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)pɔːreɪʃ(ə)n/ noun. L20.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + PORE noun[1] + -ATION.]
BIOLOGY. The process of introducing DNA or chromosomes into cells using an electrical pulse to create temporary pores in the cell membranes.
■ electroporate verb L20.

electrostatic /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)ˈstatɪk/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + STATIC, after hydrostatic.]
Of or pertaining to stationary electric charges or electrostatics; employing or designating a steady electric field.

H. M. ROSENBERG Electrons can be focussed into narrow beams by electrostatic or magnetic lenses.

electrostatic units a system of electrical units based on the force between two electric charges, assuming the permittivity of the vacuum to be 1.
■ electrostatical adjective = ELECTROSTATIC M19. electrostatically adverb L19.

electrostatics /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)ˈstatɪks/ noun. E19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + STATICS.]
The branch of physics that deals with electrostatic phenomena and properties.

electrotonic /ɪˌlɛktrə(ʊ)ˈtɒnɪk/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + TONIC adjective.]
1 Designating the state of an electric conductor in the vicinity of another conductor through which an electric current is flowing. Now rare or obsolete. M19.
2 BIOLOGY. Characterized by electrotonus; of, pertaining to, or designating the steady flow of electric charge in a cell or tissue in the absence of action potentials. M19.

electrotonus /ɪlɛkˈtrɒtənəs, ɛl-/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + TONE noun, TONUS.]
The altered state of a nerve due to the passage of a steady electric current through it.

electrotype /ɪˈlɛktrə(ʊ)tʌɪp/ noun, adjective, & verb. M19.
[ORIGIN from ELECTRO- + -TYPE.]
▸ A noun. A duplicate made by electroplating an object or a mould of it; a relief printing block made in this way. M19.
▸ B adjective. Pertaining to or designating an electrotype. M19.
▸ C verb trans. Make an electrotype of. M19.
■ electrotyper noun L19.

electrum /ɪˈlɛktrəm/ noun. LME.
[ORIGIN Latin from Greek ēlektron.]
1 A native mixture of gold with 20 per cent or more of silver; a pale yellow alloy with the same composition, used in jewellery. LME.
†2 Amber. LME–L18.
3 An alloy of copper, nickel, and zinc. L19.

electuary /ɪˈlɛktjʊ(ə)ri/ noun. arch. LME.
[ORIGIN Late Latin elect(u)arium, prob. from Greek ekleikton, from ekleikhein lick up.]
1 A medicinal substance mixed with honey or syrup. LME.
†2 = ELECTRUM 1, 2. M16–M17.

eledone /ɛlɪˈdəʊni/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin (see below) from Greek eledōnē a kind of polypus.]
An eight-armed bottom-dwelling cephalopod of the genus Eledone, related to the octopus.

eleemosynary /ˌɛlɪːməˈsɪnəri, -ˈmɒz-/ noun & adjective. L16.
[ORIGIN medieval Latin eleemosynarius, (in sense A.1) -synarium, from ecclesiastical Latin eleemosyna alms from Greek eleēmosunē compassionateness, from eleēmōn compassionate, from eleos mercy: see -ARY[1]. Cf. ALMS.]
▸ †A noun. 1 = ALMONRY. L16–L17.
2 = ALMONER. rare. M17–E19.
3 A person who is dependent on alms. M–L17.
▸ B adjective. 1 Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of, alms or almsgiving; charitable. E17.

C. BRONTË Eleemosynary relief never yet tranquillized the working classes.

2 Dependent on or supported by alms. M17.

N. HAWTHORNE Threw forth . . food, for the flock of eleemosynary doves.

elegance /ˈɛlɪg(ə)ns/ noun. E16.
[ORIGIN French élégance from Latin elegantia, from elegant-: see ELEGANT, -ANCE.]
1 The state or quality of being elegant; refined luxury; tasteful correctness; ingenious simplicity. E16.
2 Something that is elegant; a refinement. L17.

elegancy /ˈɛlɪg(ə)nsi/ noun. M16.
[ORIGIN Latin elegantia: see ELEGANCE, -ANCY.]
1 = ELEGANCE 1. Now rare. M16.
2 = ELEGANCE 2. L16.

elegant /ˈɛlɪg(ə)nt/ adjective. L15.
[ORIGIN Old French & mod. French élégant or Latin elegant-, elegans rel. to eligere to select: see ELECT verb, -ANT[1].]
1 Of a person: that dresses tastefully. L15.
2 Characterized by grace of form, style, or movement; refined; graceful, free from awkwardness, coarseness, or clumsiness. E16.

I. MURDOCH The long loose robes, too elegant to be called dressing-gowns, which she . . put on in the evenings.
R. CONQUEST A statesmanlike speech in very elegant French.

elegant variation iron. the stylistic fault of deliberately avoiding repetition by using different words for the same thing.
3 Of a person: correct and delicate in taste. Now only in elegant scholar. E17. ▸b Refined in manners and habits (formerly also in feeling). E18.
4 Characterized by refined luxury. L17.

WILKIE COLLINS He felt languid pulses in elegant bedrooms.

5 Of interests, activities, etc.: appropriate to people of refinement and cultivated taste. E18.

W. M. CRAIG A high state of the elegant arts . . is indicative of great advancement in civilization.

6 Ingeniously simple and effective. E18.

W. MEID An elegant solution of this long-standing riddle.

7 Excellent, first-rate. US. M18.
■ elegantly adverb E16.

élégante /elegɑ̃ːt/ noun. Pl. pronounced same. L18.
[ORIGIN French, fem. of élégant ELEGANT.]
A fashionable woman.

elegiac /ɛlɪˈdʒʌɪək/ adjective & noun. L16.
[ORIGIN French élégiaque or late Latin elegiacus from Greek elegeiakos, from elegeia, elegeion ELEGY: see -AC.]
▸ A adjective 1 a PROSODY. Used in or appropriate to elegies. L16. ▸b Of a poet: that writes in an elegiac metre, or in a mournful or pensive style. L16.

a SIR W. SCOTT Hast thou no elegiac verse For Brunswick's venerable hearse?

a elegiac couplet, elegiac distich composed of a dactylic hexameter followed by a dactylic pentameter. elegiac stanza a quatrain of iambic pentameters rhyming abab.
2 Pertaining to or of the nature of an elegy; mournful, melancholy. E17.

L. Lee Mother's lamentations reach elegiac proportions.

▸B noun. In pl. Elegiac verses. L18.

■ elegiacal adjective (arch.) = ELEGIAC adjective LME. elegiacally adverb L20.

elegiast /ɪˈliːdʒɪast/ noun. rare. M18.
[ORIGIN from ELEGY after ecclesiast.]
A writer of elegies.

elegit /ɪˈliːdʒɪt/ noun. E16.
[ORIGIN Latin, 3rd person sing. perf. of eligere choose, a word occurring in the writ.]
LAW (now hist.). A writ of execution by which a judgement creditor was put in possession of all or (earlier) half the goods and lands of a debtor, until the claim was satisfied; the right secured by such a writ.

elegy /ˈɛlɪdʒi/ noun. E16.
[ORIGIN French élégie or Latin elegia from Greek elegeia, from elegos mournful poem: see -Y³.]
1 A song of lamentation, esp. for the dead; a poem written in an elegiac metre. E16.
2 A poem, or poetry, written in elegiac metre, or for which this metre would have been used in classical times. L16.
■ elegize verb intrans. & trans. compose an elegy (on); write in a mournful style: E18.

eleme /ˈɛlmi/ noun & adjective. L19.
[ORIGIN Turkish = something selected.]
(Designating) a kind of dried fig from Turkey.

element /ˈɛlɪmənt/ noun. ME.
[ORIGIN Old French & mod. French élément from Latin elementum (esp. in pl.) principle, rudiment, letter of the alphabet, used as translation of Greek stoikheion step, component part.]
▸I The four elements.
1 Earth, air, fire, or water (these being collectively regarded as the constituents of the material world by ancient and medieval philosophers). ME.
2 In pl. Atmospheric agencies, esp. wind and storm. Chiefly as the elements. ME.
3 †a Any of the celestial spheres of ancient cosmology; a celestial object. ME–E17. ▸b The sky. obsolete exc. dial. L15.
4 One of the four elements that is the natural abode of a person etc.; gen. one's natural surroundings, one's appropriate or favourite sphere of operation. L16.

G. Gissing Clifford was never so much in his element as when conversing of art. Truth Early nineteenth century in character, he was . . out of his element in this neo-Georgian era.

5 A primordial principle, a source, an origin. rare. E17.
▸II Component part.
6 Any of the relatively simple substances of which a complex substance or material body is compounded; in pl., the raw material of anything. Orig. spec. as in branch I. LME. ▸b spec. in SCIENCE. Any of the substances (numbering more than 100) that cannot be chemically interconverted or broken down into simpler substances and are primary constitutents of matter. M17.

Shakes. Temp. The elements Of whom your swords are temper'd. b Practical Gardening The principal elements obtained from the soil are nitrogen, potassium, phosphorus, calcium and magnesium.

Forming the compar. of adjectives and adverbs, now esp. of words of one syllable and occas. of two, as colder, narrower, etc.
— NOTE: Mod. spelling conventions are as follows: Words in -e drop the e, as brave: braver; a final single consonant other than h, w, or x is doubled if preceded by a single-letter vowel, as grim: grimmer; in most adjectives and a few adverbs in -y the y becomes i, as early: earlier, similarly in words in -ey, as gooey: gooier.

-er /ə/ suffix[4] (not productive).
[ORIGIN Repr. Anglo-Norman inf. ending of verbs.]
Forming nouns, freq. in LAW, with the sense '(a single instance of) the verbal action, a document effecting this', as cesser, dinner, disclaimer, misnomer, supper, etc.

-er /ə/ suffix[5].
[ORIGIN Old English -(e)rian = Old Saxon, Old High German -ārōn, Old Norse -ra, from Germanic.]
Forming frequentative and iterative verbs from (parts of) verbs or on sound-imitation, as clamber, clatter, mutter, shudder, slumber, twitter, etc.

-er /ə/ suffix[6]. Also -ers /əz/. M19.
Added to shortened forms of words to form slang & colloq. equivalents, as brekker, footer, rugger, etc., among which soccer has passed into general use. As well as appearing in pls., as Divvers etc., the var. -ers is used esp. in proper names (e.g. Twickers = Twickenham) and to form adjectives, as bonkers, crackers, preggers, starkers, etc.
— NOTE: Orig. Rugby School slang, adopted at Oxford University, and then into wider use.
